Experience Klamath Outdoor Science School's new INQUIRY CAMPS!

Available for 5th-12th grades
April-June, 2009

KOSS is now offering a new Inquiry Option to its residential outdoor school programming. In this 4-day program, your class will experience full-inquiry outdoor science aligned to Oregon science standards. After exploratory experiences, students will work in teams to design investigations to answer their own questions about nature. They will have an opportunity to use our new LabQuest electronic data loggers and other scientific tools. Students will collect and analyze their data in an Outdoor Investigation Journal provided by KOSS. This journal can be used as a work sample for science inquiry. This is a perfect opportunity for students and teachers to experience the inquiry process with instructors who are trained in that process and have an extensive knowledge about the natural world. Inquiries can focus on forest, wetland, or stream environments.
